30 Day Challenge

1. This is where my 30 day challenge suffered the most. I don't feel my strength lies in creating characters, never has. I tried to pour in all my work to my other project first. I did however become more comfortable with Zbrush the more I used it. I tried the iPad version but I really think my strength lies in the PC version. I did not develop my characters as much as I wanted but I will still spend time on them for the final. I was proud of the animal I made though, I think that one looks the best. It might not look like much but it took awhile to do. It took me longer on these than the others per project. I am going for the Pokémon level characters. And even that seems difficult to me. I think , and it might sound ridiculous to say, I just didn't have enough time to get them where I got my other projects to. If I could have poured in the same amount of passion and time I think I could have gotten there faster. But, I did learn a TON about Zbrush compared to the beginning of the semester. I just really have to focus on not chasing perfection.
